

Authors Biography

Global South Review

Vol. 4, No.1, January 2022

Diah Ayu Wulandari is an educator with three years of experience teaching at formal and non-formal institutions in Indonesia and abroad. She has been teaching civic education and social studies both in national and national plus schools. In the last two years, Diah has continuously conducted research and published papers in reputable international journals. Diah has the enthusiasm to analyze and contribute to resolving international issues, especially in the education sector. To support her passion as an educator and international issues enthusiast, she is genuinely interested in several fields, such as education, public relation, politics, and diplomacy. Diah Attained her bachelor's degree in education from Universitas Negeri Surabaya and holds a master's degree in international relations from Universitas Gadjah Mada. Diah conducted a thesis in the educational diplomacy sector. Her thesis was awarded as the best thesis in the subfield of international politics in the master's program of international relations at Universitas Gadjah Mada.

Maudy Noor Fadhlia has been working as a lecturer of Department of International at Universitas Sriwijaya. She graduated from Department of International Relations of Universitas Padjadjan for bachelor's degree in 2016 and International Relations programme of Corvinus University of Budapest for master's degree in 2021. Her research interests include foreign policy, international political economy, environmentalism, international development, and area studies mainly for East Asian countries.

Azza Bimantara is a lecturer of International Relations programme at Universitas Muhammadiyah Malang. He earned his bachelor's degree from the Department of International Relations at Universitas Gadjah Mada in 2017. For his undergraduate thesis, he researched Icelandic economic liberalisation policies that allowed political economic elites' corrupt behaviours, which led to Iceland's economic meltdown during the 2007-2008 Financial Crisis. He also graduated with MA in International Relations from the Corvinus University of Budapest in 2021. His master's thesis compared Japanese and South Korean practices on international cybersecurity capacity-building cooperation based on respective normative structures, roles and identities, interests, and pertinent behaviours/policies. His current research expertise includes international political economy, European politics, Southeast Asian and ASEAN politics, and geopolitics. He has researched and written several publications about the Sino-US trade war, South-South cooperation worldwide, international cooperation on cybersecurity capacity building, comparative approaches to sustainable development, and the forthcoming topic on ASEAN institutionalisation amidst Indo-Pacific geopolitics.

Ica Cahayani was a graduate student in International Relations, Universitas Gadjah Mada. Enthusiastic, passionate, and highly desired to explore knowledge related to environmental and economy sustainability, climate change, international cooperation and development covering the realms of global political economy, security, global value chains and diplomacy. Currently, focusing on conducting research on the relationship between politics in Global South countries, climate change, economy and economic sharia, digital finance, the environment and the role of international regimes in climate change issues such as the G20, UNFCCC and the Paris Agreement.

Ahmad Mujaddid Fachrurreza is a Lecturer Assistant at Universitas Muhammadiyah Yogyakarta focusing on international social movement, international relations theory, and Middle East studies. Previously he achieved his bachelor's degree from Universitas Muhammadiyah Yogyakarta, majoring in International Relations. Currently, he is pursuing his master's degree in International Relations at Universitas Gadjah Mada. His research interests include migration studies, ASEAN, international cooperation, diplomacy, advocacy networks, and human rights.

Agata Nina Puspita was a graduate student at Universitas Gadjah Mada. She actively contributes to Modern Diplomacy as an opinion-maker by providing qualitative analysis in the form of political commentary, policy inquiry and special reports. Her research interests include practices and policies in international cooperation and development covering realms of global political economy, trade and investment politics, global value chains, legal frameworks for international cooperation and business diplomacy. She is also interested in the teaching and learning, cultural, gender issues and metacognitive strategies within classroom.

Ambar Alimatur Rosyidah is a graduate student in communication science at Gadjah Mada University, specialising in media and digital communications. She earned a bachelor's degree in communication studies from the University of Indonesia, specialising in broadcasting creative industries. Previously, she had experience in various communication fields: reporter, strategic planner, and digital marketing trainer. She has also attended various trainings in writing, film and digital marketing. She works as a brand consultant at the creative agency she founded. Apart from her professional field, she actively participates in international conferences and does scientific writing. One of her studies, entitled "Cyber Crime Against Women in Fintech Lending and The Role of PDP Law" regarding gender and communication policy, received the best paper from the International Postgraduate Student Conference 2023 Faculty of Law, UGM. Her research interests are art and film studies, Asian Studies, digital communication, gender studies and communication policies. The author can be contacted via email: ambaralimaturrosyidah@mail.ugm.ac.id

Farah Fajriyah is a graduate student in communication science at Gadjah Mada University. She has also completed her Bachelor of Communication Studies at UIN Sunan Ampel Surabaya. Previously she was involved in various research programs that focused on socio-economics. She was also involved in research realization programs, making modules for inclusion school, and public instruments for YouTube content. And also involved in the realization of programs that focus on talent development. In the field of writing, she also had the opportunity to get the best paper category in The 2nd International Postgraduate Student Conference 2023 with the title paper “Cyber Crime Against Women in Fintech Lending and The Role of PDP Law.” Meanwhile, her research interests are gender and media studies, especially in masculinity, women in cyberspace, communication and digital culture, including popular culture and also media policy for communication and media contexts. The author can be contacted via email: farahfajriyah@mail.ugm.ac.id

Diandra Ayu Larasati is a graduate student of Master in International Relations, Gadjah Mada University. Aiming to pursue an expertise in Russia and Post-Soviet countries area studies, she currently focuses on writing her thesis about the robustness of Russian-led post-Soviet countries’ security regime following Russia’s ongoing war with Ukraine. If you have further inquiries, you can contact her at d.ayu@mail.ugm.ac.id.