

Authors Biography

Global South Review

Muhd Rafli Ramadhan Warganegara is currently pursuing a master's degree in MSc Development Studies (Political Economy) at SOAS, University of London. His research interests revolve around the intricate connection between economic growth and sustainability, encompassing topics such as measurement, industrial policy, global commodity chains, and feminist political economy. Rafli is particularly focused on addressing the challenges of sustainability through green growth and green industrial policy. He has undertaken several works on the political economy of technology, green growth, and social reproduction, contributing to the broader understanding of how economic policies can align with “sustainable” development based on niche socio-political context.

Nabila Talitha Sani earned her bachelor's degree in International Relations from Universitas Gadjah Mada. Currently an analyst at a global management consulting firm, she has extensive experience in both qualitative and quantitative research across wide array of industries. Her academic background focuses on studies around global politics and political economy where she wrote her thesis on Indonesia-Australia Relations on Rohingya refugee crisis management. Nabila's research interests encompass political economy and development, global security, and local empowerment through policy initiatives.

Rakyan Sekar Kinanthi Mutiara Putri is a Project Manager at Yayasan Mestara with nearly 1.5 years of experience in corporate governance. She received her bachelor's degree in Social Development and Welfare Studies from Universitas Gadjah Mada in 2022. Her academic and professional experiences have fostered her interests in corporate social responsibility and gender studies.

Kevin Rendra Pratama is a graduate of the International Relations Study Program at Universitas Diponegoro. His research interests are human security, democratization, and transnationalism. He could be reached at kev.rendrapratama@gmail.com.

Priagung Arif Budi Wibawa is a Master's student of International Relations at Universitas Gadjah Mada, having major interest in international politics, particularly geopolitics, security studies, and diplomacy topics.

I Gede Wahyu Widnyana is an assistant researcher for Professor Ni Wayan Sri Astiti, who specializes in Subak and gender issues. He is currently pursuing a master's degree in Geopolitics and Connectivity at the University of Groningen, supported by LPDP scholarship from the Ministry of Finance of the Republic of Indonesia. His research interests include geopolitics, the space race, agricultural politics, and the Anthropocene.

Rivelda Pricilia Heatubun is a journalist at Nation State: Journal of International Relations, Amikom University. She is currently pursuing a master's degree at Gadjah Mada University, supported through an LPDP scholarship from the Ministry of Finance of the Republic of Indonesia. Her research interests include global political economy, sister city cooperation, and international development.

Yusril Ihza Mahendra is a master's student at Gadjah Mada University. His research interests cover the issues of regional politics, non-traditional security, economic development, and political discourse in international relations.

Carlos David Zavarce Velasquez is an Assistant Professor at the Graduate School of Law, Tohoku University, Sendai, Japan. He holds a Doctoral degree in Law (Political Science) from Tohoku University, a Master's degree in International Relations from Instituto de Altos Estudios de Seguridad de la Nación, a Master's degree in Business Management, and a Bachelor's degree in International Studies from Universidad Central de Venezuela. His work focuses on South-South Cooperation, Venezuela's Foreign Policy, and East Asian Development Cooperation in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Rizki Faisal Ali is a Master of International Relations student in Gadjah Mada University with a special interest in Digital Transformation and Competitiveness. He has a great interest in doing research on the correlation between the phenomenon of digital transformation and international relations, where digital transformation cannot be ignored or only considered as a neutral tool, but there is a purpose behind it. In addition, multinational companies and countries as actors continue to arouse his curiosity in seeing the phenomenon of digital transformation, especially when it comes from the Global South.